'Small Town To Big Apple' is the new one man play written and performed by Greg Chapman, who plays Jack Matthews, a young man from a small town in America, in the 1920s, who dreams of being a writer and goes to New York in search of a story to tell. When the job he was hoping to get at a newspaper falls through, he finds himself working first in a bar, and then later backstage in one of the many theatres in the city.

Through these jobs Jack finds himself involved with people from the theatre, and the musicians of Tin Pan Alley.

Clearbrook Community Association

The play at times funny, at times deeply moving tells the story of a young man from a small town who suddenly finds himself in a big city, of his life, love and dreams, and of various characters he meets along the way.
